About me

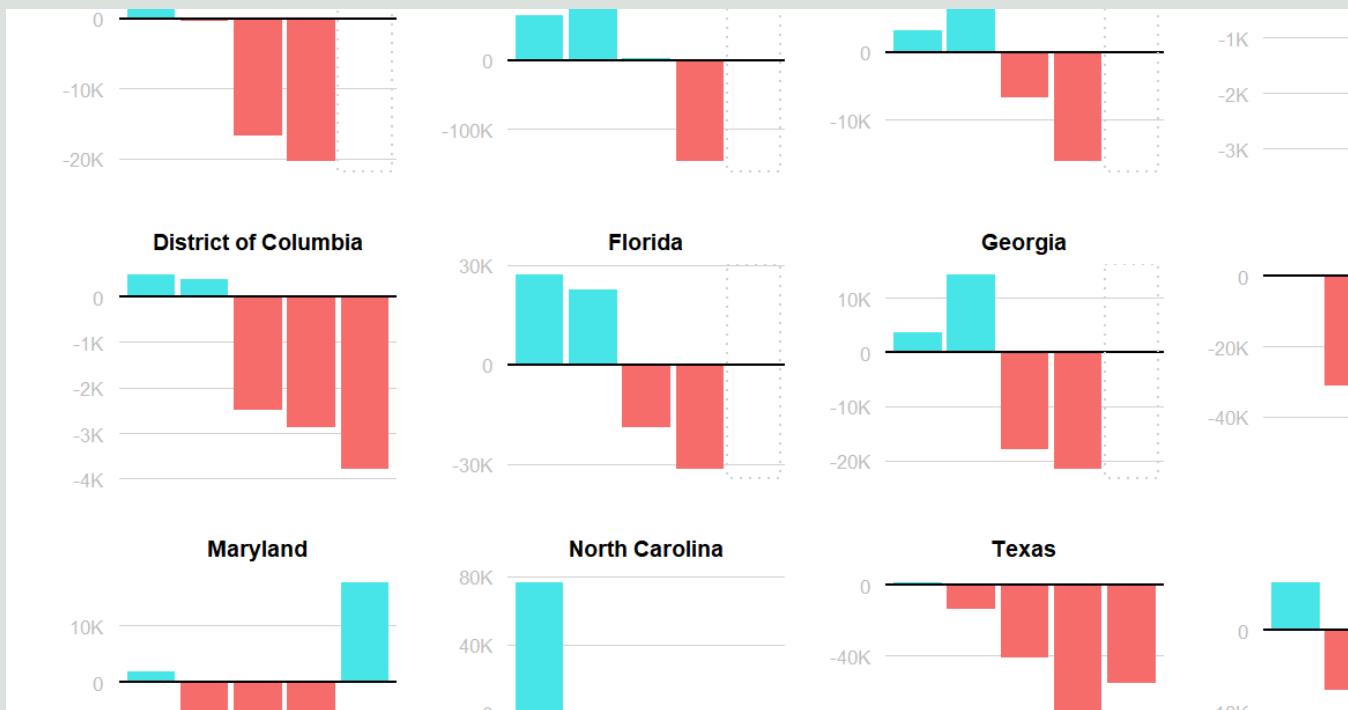

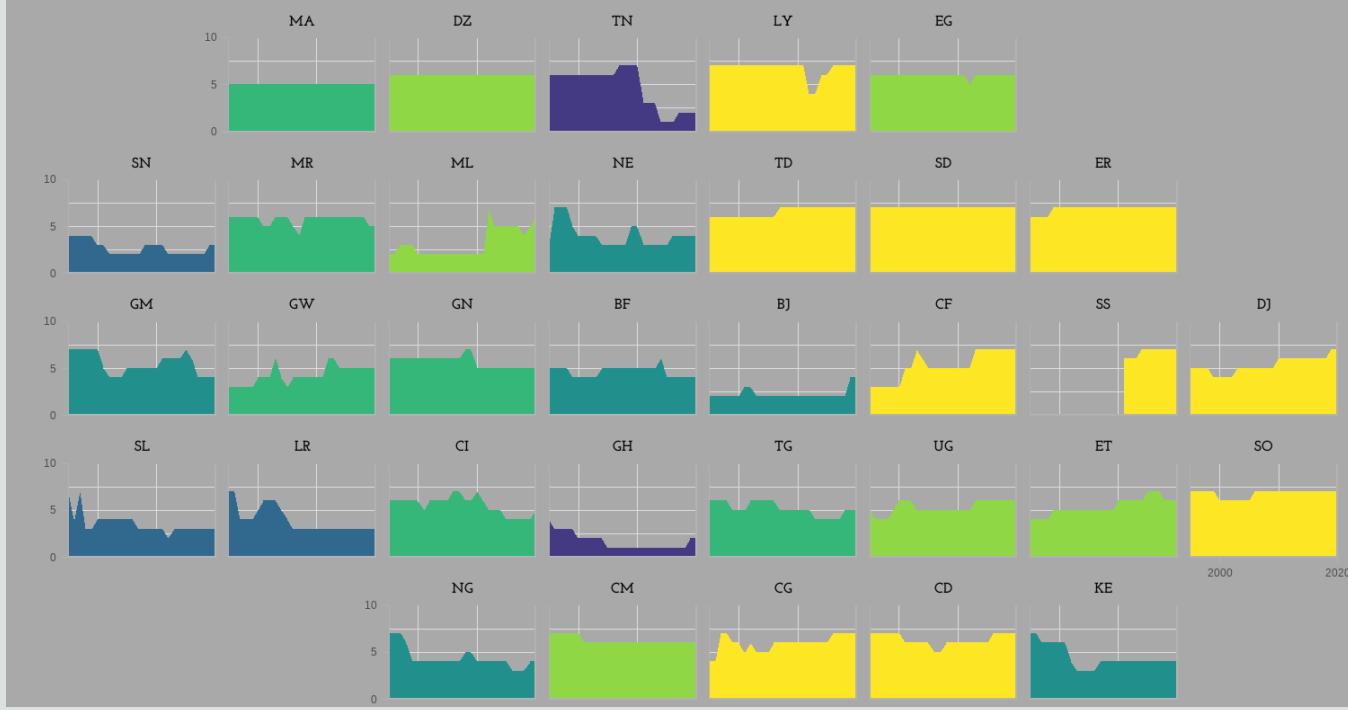

Hi, I'm Karol, a Business Consultant who believes in using data evidence to drive positive change for communities.

3 things to know

- Ten years experience
- Business acumen
- Data justice focus

My work is grounded in recognizing that data is not neutral or objective but is shaped by social and political contexts, power dynamics, and historical inequalities.

I ensure culturally relevant data analysis by

- Democratizing relevant data and resources by making them public
- Disaggregating data to be more representative
- Using people-first language alongside their data
- Democratizing relevant data and resources by making them public
- Using models centered on human experiences

In the fight for justice and equity, data is a critical tool

Does this data capture the experiences it is supposed to represent?

Can we do more to collect and analyze the data to ensure it is representative?

Are we telling the story through data in a way that meets our audience where they are and brings them along on the journey toward change as partners instead of adversaries?
